WHEN HIS TEXTS SLOW DOWN

I don't want to read into the quiet, so I'm asking instead: are we good?

Short, direct, and calm. One clear question.

AFTER A FIGHT: GOING FIRST

I've been thinking about earlier. I don't want to be right, I want us to be okay. Can we talk tonight?

Puts the relationship ahead of winning.

WHEN YOU WANT TO KNOW WHERE THIS IS GOING

I really enjoy what we have, and I'm starting to catch feelings. I'd love to know where you're at.

Shares first, then asks. Feels safe to answer.

WHEN YOU'RE LEFT ON READ

I noticed my last couple of messages didn't get a reply. I'm not upset, I just don't want to keep texting into a void. Are you still interested?

Asks for a straight answer, calmly.

DRAWING A BOUNDARY, KINDLY

When plans change last minute, I feel like an afterthought. Can we give each other a heads-up next time?

Says how it lands and asks for one specific change.

This is 5 of 50 texts across 7 moments: slow replies, after a fight, "where is this going," after a date, left on read, boundaries, and goodbyes.
